Two actual issues that happened to me:
1) Seller described a radio as near perfect, wonderful condition. What arrived actually reeked with cigarette smoke, was scratched, obviously well worn, and caked with gunk I have to assume was the source of the cigarette smell. After three attempts to get a response from seller, I gave him negative feedback. His immediate response was negative feedback in retaliation, calling me a crook and claiming I didn't even try to contact him....
2) Seller described item as great condition, offered fast shipping, I executed a buy it now, paid immediately for product, shipping and insurance, and waited for arrival. Sent four separate emails to him at his email address plus 3 via e-Bay, and each time I recieved a message that either the product had been sent, or that he would send it immediately. NO information on when sent, which carrier, nothing. Process dragged on and I placed negative feedback last day system would allow me, giving him the greatest opportunity to actually ship the item. Result? near immediate negative feedback, claiming I never contacted him (though I had emails from him for each one I sent, all basically lies to keep me going). Never did get the product. Further, the idiot tries a month later to get me to reverse the feedback!!! No product, no refund, and expects me to drop the negative. I don't know how many people this works with, but obviously it does work or he wouldn't be trying it. Watching his feedback numbers for a few months after, I can see the number of negatives actually decreases with time (not because of the averaging or elapsed time, they actually were deleted).

The result is that I no longer provide negative feedback. Really great system, huh? When it gets to the point that a buyer cannot give honest feedback in fear of retaliation, the system is just not working. I've never received a negative feedback when selling, always sent positive when buyer paid within decent time, (as the system was designed) and have only recieved negatives after giving negatives when I was a buyer and the seller didn't meet their obligations.

I guess it just goes to show the way society in general is degrading. Entropy seems to be taking over. The auction experience, once populated by individuals that were selling personal equipment/items is now overrun with high volume companies, scammers and people cashing in on the previous success of the auction process. [sigh]

did you forge other hams calls on the Gav blog?

Truely, are you that stupid. Somebody educate the fool, why do you think the Justice department started working with software manufactures quite a few years ago, there are safeguards in place, and there has been for quite a while.

Certain agencies don't need court orders they can trace net traffic and tap phones at will. Where in the hell have you been living for the past 6 years, under a rock? And no one is going to forge the email but you, no one is going to beg for your blog back but you.

Using your call in a blog is not forgery. Fucking dofus.
